

Handwritten text in a medieval script, likely Gothic or similar, on the left side of the parchment. The text is dense and covers several lines, though some characters are difficult to decipher due to the age and wear of the document.

Handwritten text in a medieval script, likely Gothic or similar, on the right side of the parchment. The text is dense and covers several lines, continuing the narrative or legal document from the left side.

Handwritten text in a medieval script, likely Gothic or similar, on the far right side of the parchment. The text is dense and covers several lines, possibly representing a signature or a specific clause.

Handwritten text at the bottom of the page, possibly a signature or a specific clause, written in a medieval script. The text is less dense than the main body of the document.

Testament de Joan Mulla & Jaume
f. 100. v. 10

1717